

Abstract

Considered the possibility of creating terahertz reflectometers. The scheme of a reflectometer, based on quantum-cascade laser is proposed. The problems associated with the use of this type of laser were identified, and some options for their solutions were offered. The software for experimental data processing was developed